A FINE OPPORTUNITY FOR A HOUSECLEANING

Every once in a while there come times when all signs fail. Yesterday was one of those times, for to say that the election returns were a surprise is expressing it very mildly indeed. Liberals and conservatives alike, from Atlantic to Pacific, today are wondering how it happened and what were the factors which contributed most to the government's defeat, and it is safe to say that the liberals were not a bit more surprised than the conservatives by the landslide nor that the conservatives are any more at a loss to account for it than the liberals.

Possibly the best explanation of what happened would be to say that the government had been too long in power; that it had commenced to show corrosion and a change was due. The cumulative forces of the antagonisms which the government has laid up for itself, and which any party in power must lay up for itself, concentrating in one grand onslaught, laid the dominant party aside and erected in its stead a government whose only pledge to the electors is that it will do nothing.

Undoubtedly someone blundered, and blundered badly, in the choice of a time for the election. Had the government pushed its reciprocity bill through the house and given the Dominion of Canada one year of freer trade with the United States it is scarcely possible that an opposition to tariff reduction as provided for in the pact could have found a following in any part of Canada. Certainly the government, in its precipitate hurry to go to the country, sacrificed one great advantage in the respect that it did not have the representation in the west which redistribution would have provided.

But it requires a great stretch of credulity even now to believe that it was a desire to smash reciprocity which led to the government's defeat.

Possibly Edmonton furnishes as good an example of what happened as any city in Canada. In the election of 1896 Frank Oliver went to Ottawa as the living embodiment of the west's righteous wrath against the dominance of railway and corporation influence in politics and high tariff. In the election which culminated yesterday in his virtual defeat in his home city he suffered the penalty of having been branded an agent of the very railway and corporation politics which he went east to oppose. The change was in Oliver and not in the sentiments of the people of Edmonton. This city is as much in favor of lower tariff today as it was in 1896, and referendum on the question of reciprocity would undoubtedly so declare. But this city has no more patience with the devious methods of corporation politicians today than it had in the days of long ago, when Frank Oliver was the unsullied champion of the people's rights in their struggle for emancipation from the chattel ownership of the C. P. R. In fact, it is now very clearly evident that had the conservative candidate made the fight along these lines and left reciprocity out of it altogether Oliver would have been snowed under.

But the penalty which the government pays for Oliver is by no means confined to Edmonton. In Saskatoon, a city naturally wedded to free trade, in which McCraney had 1200 majority at the last election, a conservative is this time elected by a majority of 494, one of the most phenomenal turn-overs ever recorded in Canada. Saskatoon is right in the country affected by the alienation of the enormous land grant to the Canadian Northern by Oliver's order in council of May 8, 1908, and the discussion of this order and its effects formed the most important feature of the campaign in that city and district.

In Prince Albert, another constituency directly affected by the big land grab, the Oliver charges were the main feature of the campaign and so insistent did the residents of that district become that Frank Oliver found it incumbent upon himself to go down to Prince Albert to try to still the tumult with his famous (or infamous) chanty on thugs, grafters and blackmailers. Prince Albert has everything to gain and nothing to lose by reciprocity, yet the vote shows that a liberal victory of 129 for Italian at the last general elections is turned into a conservative triumph in the election of McKay by a majority of 250, a turn of nearly 400 votes, a clear case of the penalty the government paid for Oliver.

In Qu'Appelle, at the other end of the district in which the land was granted by Oliver, Lake, who also used the Oliver charges to the exclusion of almost every other topic and who pointed out to men thoroughly familiar with the land given away the extent of from 13 at the last Dominion elections to 300 yesterday. Qu'Appelle has absolutely nothing in common with the advocates of higher tariff.

In Portage La Prairie, Arthur Meighan, the committeeman who fought Oliver on the floor of the house and who tried in every manner within his power as a parliamentarian to push ahead the investigation, used the Oliver charges throughout his entire campaign, with the result that a conservative majority of 250 which he recorded at the last general election is made 1833 at this. And this majority is secured right in the heart of the wheat-growing sections of Manitoba where even a schoolboy knows that a plebiscite on reciprocity would carry in favor of the pact.

Thomas Crothers, the other committeeman who went after Oliver in the investigation, also records a largely increased majority, but it is quite possible that considerable of this increase might be attributed to the general sweep which the conservatives had in the east, although it is a fact that Crothers himself has never been overtly popular with his constituents, and it is also a fact that Crothers paid vastly more attention to a recitation in West Elgin of his work as a committeeman on the Oliver investigation than he did to the question of reciprocity.

All along the line, wherever the electors were brought directly into contact with the Oliver charges the government suffered the penalty.

The object lesson is as plain as Pike's Peak. The people themselves are honest at heart and have no patience with politicians whom they suspect of dishonesty. To hold public confidence any government must be most jealously careful of the reputation of its members and must labor without compunction the first who steps aside. To keep his followers spottled throughout a long term of years is a task which any leader would find almost impossible and his danger naturally grows with the years that he is in office. Sir Wilfrid has been ruthless in his eliminations when he thought the necessities demanded them, but he was lulled into security by the warmth which the west expressed toward him personally and the Oliver affair caught him napping in a set of circumstances over which he had no control.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier in his dealings with the west has been liberal almost to the point of generosity and he is today, as the votes of yesterday show, the darling of the hearts of all good westerners. But he made a mistake in his choice of a deputy.

Without Oliver the west would almost certainly have gone solid for Laurier and freer trade. With Oliver the west did well to hold its own.

The defeat of the liberal party furnishes a fine opportunity for a housecleaning.

THE STOREKEEPER

It Doesn't Pay to Keep Everything
By Kenneth Harris

"Seems like you hadn't got much selection," grumbled the suitor-fellow in the rose-pink sabbaton as he figured the bolt of lady-cloth the storekeeper had just taken from the shelf. "Hain't you got but the green and the yaller in that?"

"There's the onliest shades I've got," replied the storekeeper, "I s'pose I'll have to take the yaller then," said the woman, discontentedly. "Gut me off to ten yards."

When the woman had left the store Old Man Somarivik was moved to give the storekeeper some advice. "One of these yer fine days some fellow'll move in here with a stock of goods, an' then you'll have a right smart of time on your hands that you won't have no use for," he predicted.

"I hain't have a right smart of goods on my hands that I don't have no use for if I wasn't keeful about my money," the storekeeper retorted.

"When you come to study on that there's, sartin' in it," observed Washington Haincock. "I reckon there's about five hundred barrels' extra tobacco, an' it's the same with whiskey, but seems like a feller'd be tempted to take more'n was good for him if he had to sample 'em all. As one as hain't don't run plumb out of Peck-Awe, but sartin' to buy Nigger-head, an' when Peck goes with his rations between Bourbon and rye I feel 's' if that was all the choice I had. I like a chance to pick an' choose, but I don't want too dogged much to choose from."

Same With Girls

"It's the same way with girls," Haincock continued. "I reckoned when Yank Jackson first came out here from Massachusetts. He was a young buck then Yank was, an' mighty likely lookin' an' an' he come part-crowd of the Gussie Neek Wainesses 'at was some far-away kin of his an' part-crowd of the daisy's farm back East but sartin' out."

"About the first thing Miss Parker Adams said to him was that a good lookin', hard-workin' feller like him ought to be able to p'ade some gal another to marry him. You must be such on to thirty, hain't you?" says she.

"Miss Adams didn't say nothin' to that. She just gave him a look, an' I know you had to take 'em, 's' because he didn't seem particular set up. Seemed like a right clever feller for a Yankee. Well, when I set him alone, I bring back the subject an' axed him why he was so anxious to marry. He said he hain't been in the ribs an' winks at me."

"I don't see the joke," says Miss Adams. "New gals an' such a plenty nor so easy to suit, she says. 'An' old back like you might have a right smart of trouble."

"It ain't so awful much trouble for a man to crook his finger," says Yank, grinning. "Sartin' he says, 'I don't care to crook it for a while yet. Not but what I've my objection to making a deal across the otherwise, an' sartin' you or another I won't say, but I'll make a choice after I've looked 'em all over. I reckon I can say."

FORT GEORGE

The industrial and commercial centre of an Inland Empire. That it is destined to be a great city is admitted by everybody. Any one of its many natural resources will make it the Spokane of Canada.

Spokane

Situated in exactly the same type of country, and position, with not one-third of the commercial wealth surrounding Fort George has grown in thirty years to an immense city of 131,000 people and in direct competition with Portland, Seattle and Tacoma.

Now

With greater resources, better advertising, and the competition almost eliminated, why cannot Fort George be as great a city as Spokane. It can and it will. The future is a certainty.

The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway

Not only state they will make it the greatest railway centre between Edmonton and the coast, but in addition state as follows: "An important branch will be that extending from Fort George, B.C., on the main line, to Vancouver. This line will follow the Fraser River Valley, famed for its variety of natural resources, including agricultural, mineral and timber. Fort George is situated in one of the leading lumber-producing districts of British Columbia, and is destined to become one of the leading cities of the far western province. In addition to the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific and the important lines tapping the rich coal, lumber and mining districts of British Columbia will centre at Fort George."

The Time to Buy is NOW

We will always be pleased to give you any information regarding investments in Fort George, and our circular matter telling you of the great natural possibilities of the coming Metropolis is free to you.

PREPARES PLANS FOR NEW WAR-SHIP

RUSSIAN ENGINEER'S SHIP WILL BE FIVE TIMES SIZE OF LARGEST DREADNAUGHT.

(Globe Cable Service.)
London, Sept. 22.—A Russian naval engineer, M. Shuraveff, has prepared the plans of what promises to be an epoch-making ship of war. It is nothing less than a large sea-going protected cruiser which, while being ordinarily a surface-keeping vessel, will be capable of submergence in the space of three minutes. Some idea of the comparative size of the ship may be obtained from the fact that whereas Great Britain, France and Germany are only just now approaching the 10,000 mark in submarine construction, the vessel designed by M. Shuraveff will displace, when submerged, no less than 5,000 tons. This is actually in excess of the displacement of the second-class cruisers of the Dartmouth class now being completed for the British fleet.

The principal dimensions of this submarine cruiser, whose designs have been submitted to the Russian naval authorities, are as follows: Length between perpendiculars, 400.25 feet; beam, 34.2 feet, and draught when steaming on the surface, 22.5 feet. The designer has made provision for either turbines or internal combustion engines to be used for surface work, but when submerged motors would, of course, have to be used exclusively. When on the surface the horse-power developed would be 18,000, giving a maximum speed of 25 knots, while in the submerged condition the horse-power will be only 4,500, at the corresponding speed 14 knots.

A very extensive radius of action is provided for. The oil-fuel capacity of 355 tons, and it is stated that this would be sufficient to enable the vessel to cover a distance of 18,000 miles when steaming on the surface at 11 knots or 1,200 miles at 21 knots, or 750 miles at the maximum speed of 25 knots, when traveling under water the radius would be 250 miles at 6 knots, 90 miles at 10 knots, or 21 miles at the full speed of 14 knots. When it is pointed out that no submarine yet built has greater steaming radius than 2,000 miles, a greater surface speed than 16 knots, or a greater submerged speed than 10 knots, it will be understood what a revolution in submarine construction, and possibly also in naval warfare, this new vessel would entail.

Remarkable Features.
One of the most remarkable features about the ship, however, is the arrangement with which it is proposed to equip her. In a vessel primarily designed to act as a submarine torpedo boat it is natural that the torpedo equipment should hold the first place. In this Russian ship provision is made for no fewer than 30 torpedo tubes. Several foreign boats have six or seven tubes, but three is the largest number so far mounted in British submarines.

In addition to this formidable equipment it is proposed to arm the vessel with five 4.7-inch quick firing guns. The guns would be mounted on collapsible mounings, so that while they could be easily erected when the ship was steaming on the surface, they could with equal ease be stowed away below the decks when she was about to be submerged.

This idea is not altogether new, as several earlier Russian submarines carried one or two small guns, and the experiment is also being tried with small quickfired in a number of vessels now under construction for the navies of Great Britain and Germany. Even this, however, does not end the fitting equipment of this remarkable ship. She will be fitted with elaborate apparatus for the sowing of mines while under water, and for this purpose will be equipped with 120 "torpedo bluecs," or blockade mines.

The possibilities of such a vessel as this are enormous, and it is quite likely that it heralds the dawn of an era in which airships of all types will be capable of navigating on the surface or in the submerged condition.

CAME NEAR BEING BURIED ALIVE

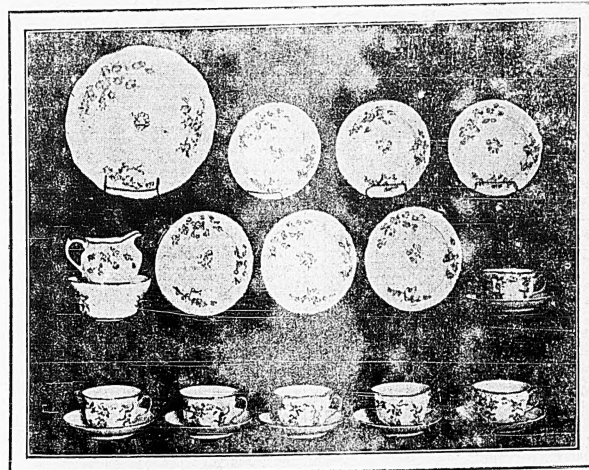

WOMAN IN ROME GOES INTO
TRANCE AND ONLY RECOVERS
AT SIDE OF GRAVE

(Globe Cable Service.)
Rome, Sept. 22.—A description from Palermo contains an account of an extraordinary case of what almost amounted to premature burial. The officials at the local cemetery were informed that a man named Serafini, a lover, aged 30, had died during the night at the Giustiniani convent, and undertakers were at once sent to make the funeral arrangements. A doctor left for the convent at the same time to certify the death and prepare the unusual funeral certificate. Great was the surprise of the nuns, however, when the doctor, after a close examination, ordered the "corpse" to be removed immediately from the chapel ardente, saying that the aged lady was merely in a comatose condition, probably as the result of a cataplexy seizure. All the preparations for the funeral, of course, were at once cancelled, and with suitable medical treatment the nun was soon restored to her normal condition. The event has naturally caused an immense sensation in the district.

Mrs. Thomas Whiffen is to appear in a vaudeville sketch this season.

SPORT NEWS FROM EVERYWHERE

TWELVE GAMES FOR TOMORROW

FIRST GAMES WILL BE PLAYED IN WEST

Formal Opening Occurs Tomorrow—Gridiron Will Be Scene of Dozen Intercollegiate Games in Middle West States—Big Eastern Universities Start Week Later

New York, Sept. 22.—Football will appear on the athletic stage tomorrow to formally open the fall season of sport at the eastern colleges. In the middle west there will be a few preliminary skirmishes, but throughout the south and the west generally the teams will not get under way for another week or two.

In this section of the country the season promises to be one of the most important in the history of the gridiron game. The new rules this year are not very different from those of last season and the early games will not bother the coaches much in trying out possibilities, as was the case last year, when radical changes had been made. There will be some experimenting, of course, but the early contests will be devoted more to sifting material and looking over the possibilities of new material.

This year's schedule calls for more varied, thus affording an early opportunity to compare Yale and Harvard scores against a common opponent, the bigger teams. The University of Pennsylvania will start the season with a game with Gettysburg college and, as usual, will close the schedule by playing Cornell on Thanksgiving day.

Yale's First Game

Yale's first game will be played on Saturday week with Holy Cross and a week later the latter will tackle Harvard.

HUNTERS!!

Nothing more interesting has come out in recent years than the new Hunting Vest. The shells protrude from beneath, so that they may easily be grasped when wanted, even by benumbed fingers; but are held in position so firmly that they cannot drop out. Made like a repeating gun—every time you take a shell out another drops down to take its place.

You simply must have one. Call and see them while they last.

Real Estate BULLETIN

Our prediction of a Real Estate movement on Jasper Avenue, west of Ninth St., has come true far sooner than we expected, and this movement still continues.

The building up of residential properties north and south of this end of Jasper Avenue, the wonderful development of the Sandison and Groat Estate, the residential districts which New Glenora, Glenora, Westmount and Inglewood are bound to be demands and must bring business blocks to the west end of Jasper Avenue.

We have still some excellent buys in this locality, buys that will make you money in the next few months.

NEWS OF THE CITY

The death occurred yesterday of William Crookshanks, aged 18 years. The funeral will take place this afternoon from Connolly and McKinley's undertaking parlors, at 2 o'clock.

A fire alarm was rung in yesterday afternoon from No. 4 polling booth, 213 Seventh street. The chimney of the building had fallen in, giving rise to fears, which were not justified, that the building would take fire.

The Ladies True Blue lodge will hold a shadow and box social, at the Cameron hall, Samaya avenue, on Friday, September 22. The proceeds will be devoted to the Orphanage scheme.

A. D. Mitzel, supreme organizer of the order of Lions of the World, yesterday attended the funeral of the infant child of M. Bulene, Saskatchewan, taking charge of the ceremony for the fraternal organization.

NECROLOGIC

The funeral will take place at Mannville today, Mrs. Susana Gilmour Knicht, wife of Robert Knicht, superintendent of the Edmonton street railway. The body was removed from the family residence, 114 Fifth street this morning, to the Canadian Northern railway station. The Loyal Order of Lions, the newly organized fraternal organization, of which Mr. Knicht was a member, sent a floral piece, while a second floral arrangement was sent by the employees of the street railway department.
